

QUICK ANSWERS

What they say, and what to say back.

Listen first. Agree with the feeling, then answer in one or two sentences. Never argue.

THEY SAY	WHAT THEY MEAN	SAY	THEN
"We already use WhatsApp."	It works, why change?	Keep WhatsApp for talking. Bod App gives the work a home, and you can copy nudges and standups straight into WhatsApp.	Ask how they find an old brief today.
"We tried a project tool. Nobody used it."	They've been burned before.	Most tools need people to update them. Bod App does the updating: it sorts the day, drafts follow-ups and writes the standup.	Offer the free month so the team decides.
"My team won't update another app."	Admin fatigue.	That's the point. Tasks can be spoken in, status is one tap, and the app writes the summaries.	Let one of them try voice to task live.
"We don't have time to set it up."	Setup feels like a project.	We set it up with you: team, clients, colours and pipeline. Start with this week's tasks only.	Book a 30-minute setup call.
"It's too expensive."	Not sure it pays back.	Put it next to the time lost to chasing and status updates. The time-saved calculator shows it in rupees.	Fill the calculator with their numbers.
"We're too small for this."	Tools feel built for big teams.	It was built for our own studio. Small teams feel the admin most, because the same people do the work and chase it.	Point to the Basic plan and the free month.

THEY SAY	WHAT THEY MEAN	SAY	THEN
"Is our client data safe?"	Trust and confidentiality.	The app runs on Google's Firebase cloud, with roles that control who sees what. We'll walk your team through it.	Confirm details with the product team before promising more.
"Does it replace Zoho or our invoicing?"	Worried about accounting changes.	No. It tells Finance what's ready to bill. Amounts and invoices stay in Zoho.	Show the Ready to bill list.
"Will the AI understand us?"	Language and accents.	It takes voice or text in English, Malayalam and Manglish, and fills in who, what and when.	Let them say a task their own way.
"The mascot feels a bit playful."	Worried it isn't serious.	Bod Annan shows up for small moments, like a weekly win. The rest of the app is calm and focused.	Show the Focus Queue, which is all business.
"Can it fit our workflow?"	Every studio works differently.	Pipeline stages, categories, roles, colours and logo can all be set up to match how you work.	Ask them to describe their stages, then map them.
"What if it doesn't work out?"	Fear of lock-in.	Start with the free month. If it doesn't earn its place, you walk away.	Confirm current contract terms before quoting them.

Three rules

- If you don't know, say so and follow up the same day.
- Don't promise features, dates or terms that aren't confirmed.
- Turn every objection into a try: "Want to see it with your own task?"
